O. H. Benson of Washington, D. C., gave a very illuminating talk to the supervisors Wednesday afternoon on the subject of agriculture in the rural school. He stated that agriculture should be coordinated or correlated with the other subjects, not necessarily substituted in piace of other subjects. His principal theme was the proper understanding of pupils in the schools, especially with regard to their likes and dislikes. He believes that the teacher to establish the proper kind of sympathy with children and parents. Another lecture of great interest was Haven road to Jackson street, and explanned by Alderman Gelinas. The pipe will be 16-inch or 18-inch, to carry off surface water, and the cost will not exceed $250. The matter was taken up by unanimous consent and the resolution adopted.

entering high school who did not expect to enter college. Since that time the number of pupils attending has increased by 300 per cent. The old-time classics have passed cut. The awakening public has compelled high schools to turn out of the rut. The high school has emerged from a narrow institution to an institution which fits boys and girls to do something. The result is that within the last seven years the high school population has practically doubled.
